

THAT BLACK FELINE

Caused a Peck of Trouble at the Council Meeting.

JOSEPH PETERS' BUILDING

Did He Have Permission to Remove It Is the Question That Excites the Aldermen.

There was a black cat in the council chamber last night. Only a tiny kitten, but it was as black as any black cat that ever helped a witch brew trouble anywhere. A good many wondered what the cat was there for. Many thought it was a stray, but before the meeting was over it became apparent that the pussy was a mischief-maker, and was there on the business of her master, the Prince of Darkness, who is said to own all black cats and to send them forth as harbingers of trouble. The little scamp wandered about under the chairs of the aldermen as quiet as you please, while the license ordinance was being considered, but as soon as that was referred to the city attorney and made a special order of business for next Wednesday night, the little imp came out of Alderman Morris' corner and with shrill meows, ran under Alderman Walkup's table where he arched his back and straightened his tail bristling and caterwauling like an evil spirit. Walkup gave him a kick and he got up to speak and the little scamp ran straight for Alderman Shovlin's chair where he sat and meowed most pitifully.

Then it was the trouble began. Alderman Walkup wanted to know the reason of certain things. Some time ago, not long ago but at a recent meeting of the council, a petition from Joseph Peters was read praying for permission to remove a certain frame building from a lot on Commercial street to another lot which is in the first limits. The council refused to grant the petition and so voted. Since then the building has been removed and has been placed on a lot apparently in defiance of the council's express command. The alderman from the Fourth ward wanted to know whose duty it is to enforce the law, and why it had not been enforced.

His questions were answered by Mayor Thornton very plainly. The mayor said he knew nothing of the matter until his return from the East yesterday morning, and as soon as he learned of it he went to see Mr. Peters about it. He was informed by Mr. Peters that it was quite true that the desired permission had been refused by the council, but since that time he had circulated a petition and five of the aldermen had signed a document consenting to the removal of the building. Therefore he had acted accordingly. And, said the mayor, the gentlemen of this council surely do not expect an executive officer to carry out a proposition to which a majority of the councilmen are opposed. It would be foolish for him to do that and he himself had seen too much of business to act in this matter of enforcing a regulation which the council had pledged themselves to waive and which they were bound by their signatures to carry out.

City Attorney O'Leary and Chief White said that this was the position to which they had been driven by the council, and it was for the same reason that no action had been taken in the premises. Chief White said he ordered work on the removal stopped, but made no further proceeding because of the signatures of the aldermen to the request to the council to grant the removal.

Then Alderman Shovlin got a chance and he was chuckful of excitement. He wanted to know what an alderman's signature on a petition amounted to. Nothing. An alderman's signature is no better than that of any other citizen. The business of the council is done only in council room and when aldermen act as individuals what they do or say on the streets cuts no figure. As for himself he did not consider that his name on that paper meant anything more than the name of any other citizen and he felt free to vote in the council as he thought best. He was opposed to allowing this building moved, as it has been; he had tried to stop it; he voted against granting the petition and he would do so again. Furthermore, he intended to take steps yet in the matter to enforce the judgment of the council, as the record shows it was made, and if there is any penalty attached to the building ordinance to enforce it.

Alderman Walkup gave notice that he would bring in an ordinance at the next meeting to repeal the ordinance recently passed defining the fire limits. The aldermen wanted to ask him some questions and to debate the question, but Mayor Thornton told them the time to do that would be when the proposed ordinance was introduced. There was no further business of importance, and the council adjourned in the midst of great excitement and strife of opinion. The little black cat had in the meantime disappeared—whether he rode out the skylight on a broomstick or followed one of the aldermen home is not known. It was distinctly noticed also that there was an odor of sulphur or brimstone in the air afterward, but that might have been from the matches with which Colonel O'Leary lighted his cigar or 'tis barely possible the cat left the scent behind. Some may doubt the story, but this is a record true of all proceedings and events as they happened at the council meeting last night, but the cat was there, the trouble and the discussion occurred, and the sulphur fumes were in the building and the cat was not seen afterward. "Further the deponent saith not."

QUIET REIGNS.

Great Changes in the Saloon Business Since July 1.

Six saloons closed their doors yesterday and the proprietors gave it out that they were going into other business. The closing was not due to a crusade or to high license, though the day of going out of business was mainly determined by the fact that their licenses for the half year expired yesterday. Most of the saloons which had thrived, and since the death of King Faro they have not had a profitable trade. The firms which suspended are Tooley & Johnson, Con Peoples, McMahon & McAuley, and Billy Burke on Front street, Ernest Jaekel on Front street, and Andi Mandoli on Commercial, who discarded his bar. The place known as the Granite gave up the struggle some weeks ago. That portion of Main street which was given up to the gambling houses is the quietest part of town. For the past five years it has been orderly, but there was usually a crowd of men surging in and out of the temples dedicated to the goddess of Chance and to Bacchus. Business was good in those days, but when the leading attraction was taken away, the stools piled legs up, on the tables the dealers and lookouts went away, and with them the crowds which had been their customers vanished and no longer spent money at the bar. Occasionally a rouser dropped in, a few of the old stand-bys kept up their practice of sleeping on the floor, but they had no money to spend. Few others came along and therefore the business ceased to be profitable, hence the shut-down. Some may open up again during the races but not likely for any length of time. With the gambling the saloons sustained thereby also depart.

Captain Eakins' Case.

The trial of Capt. Joseph B. Eakins of the Mercer street squad, accused by the Parkhurst society for inefficiency, in failing to suppress disorderly houses in the Fifteenth precinct, was continued this morning in police headquarters, New York, before Commissioner Andrews.

This is the second day of the defense, and Mr. Hess, counsel for the defendant, will call a number of witnesses to disprove the allegations of the prosecution and show that the houses claimed to be disreputable in Captain Eakins' precinct are decent, respectable and orderly houses, unknown to vice.

When the commissioner took his seat Mr. Hess called his attention to a statement attributed to Mr. Hess, which appeared in the press yesterday, which he (Mr. Hess) considered as injurious to the case of his client, who does not know Captain Wisheart. The objection was accepted and permitted to go on the record. William S. Randolph, a foreman at 204 Thompson street, was the first witness, and testified to the good character of the house, 210 Thompson street. This was also the case in regard to the house 220 Thompson street, as far as was known to the witness. He described the neighborhood as being tough five years ago, when he first came to reside there. "Since then it is gradually improving, particularly since last fall," said the witness.

In reply to Mr. Moss the witness said he saw nothing of a disreputable nature in the vicinity in which he resides. He never saw women solicit from the windows, or doors, or stoops. The witness did not know the witness, Mr. Percy, complained at any time of 210 Thompson street as being a house of assignation, nor did he know that Mr. Alers' restaurant, on the same street, was used for immoral purposes. "From my personal experience in the locality," said the witness, "I have observed a marked improvement in the condition of Thompson street, as far as its moral condition is concerned." Mr. Moss tried hard to get the witness to admit having seen women solicit on the street since January 1, but failed, as Mr. Randolph was persistent in his belief that nothing had occurred to even arouse a shadow of suspicion.

Beautiful specimens of the anchorite, or townsman, have been found in Maine and elsewhere in New England. This gem is said also to have been found in North Carolina.

SOME VERY GOOD RECORDS

Daily Exercise and Training at the Driving Park—Higgins Brothers' Stables and How the Horses Show Up.

At the race track the horsemen are carrying out the daily programme for keeping the trotters, pacers and gallopers in the best possible condition for the great days of next month. The animals are regularly exercised. Every morning from 4 o'clock until nearly noon the track is crowded by fast ones with their riders and drivers. Then comes the rub-down, and the thousand and one finishing touches which only the trainers know for perfecting their charges in health and muscle.

The principal event of yesterday was the arrival of Paddy Rice with Senator Hoffman's stable from Bozeman. With him are J. W. McManis and Ed Madden. The horses were loaded at Bozeman Saturday night, but did not reach here until Monday noon. All made the trip in good shape and are now very comfortably fixed in stalls. The stable consists of trotters all except one and that one is G. W. Wakefield, by Bozeman, dam Maxim, a 2-year-old pacer that has the 2-year-old record of 2:34. The others are Lady R. E. D., a new acquisition, a 4-year-old with a record of 2:25.

SEARCHED THE DIRECTORY.

And the Girls Kept Every One Else From Seeing It for a Full Hour.

From the Chicago Times-Herald.

Each was provided with a little memorandum book, and when they entered the drug store they went straight to the directory, unmindful of the clerk who had come forward to wait upon them.

"You can call off the names," said the one in the gray dress, "and I'll look up the addresses."

The one in blue agreed, and began calling off names and addresses, which the other looked up in the directory. For ten minutes the clerk watched them in a wondering sort of a way, and then his speculations were interrupted by a man who came in hurriedly.

"Give me a good ten-cent cigar," said the man, and then, looking around: "Where's your directory?"

Two pair of eyes greeted him with a stony stare as he finally located it.

"Beg pardon!" he said quickly. "I didn't know anybody was using it. I just wanted to get an address."

He lit his cigar and waited five minutes for a chance to get the directory. Then he left.

"I'll try somewhere else," he said as he went through the door.

"What an impudent man!" exclaimed the one in gray.

"A brute!" said the one in blue.

A few minutes later a lady entered and ordered a glass of soda water.

"May I see your directory a moment?" she asked as she paid for the soda water.

Two pair of eyes shot indignant glances at her, and she explained to the clerk that it was of no consequence and went out. She evidently knew too much to wait.

One or two others came in and went out, after noting that the two women had appropriated a couple of seats and a large section of the counter in front of the soda fountain; and then a boy entered.

"Say," he said, "you didn't give me the right address for the geezer that wanted the guinine?"

"Didn't?" asked the clerk.

"Naw, you didn't!" replied the boy. "Better get out your directory and look it up, or you'll lose the old skate's trade."

One woman rested a scornful glance on the boy and the other looked at the clerk. The clerk wilted, but the boy was made of sterner stuff.

"Kin I see that book a minute?" he asked.

They merely gave him a withering look.

The fellow's waiting to get this stuff," he persisted.

They got up and walked haughtily out.

"I shall never go to that place again," said one with determination.

"Nor I," replied the other. "Where shall we go to finish verifying that invitation list?"

And the clerk was looking at the clock and muttering: "Held sixty-eight minutes, and now they've gone away mad."
